These sets of porcelain house numbers were commonly installed on houses in Portland, Ore., in the 1930s, but they look right at home on Bay Area Edwardians and Colonial Revivals too. They're set in a galvanized steel bracket — $53 for three numbers, $64 for four and $74 for five, from www.rejuvenation.com.

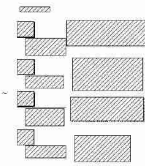

Add a lively touch of mid-century modernity with Atlas Homewares' Metropolitan line, which even includes a starburst accent. Brushed silvertone on matte black ovals. $14.90 each; www.atlashomewares.com.

Industrial meets chic with M-I-N-T's laser-cut stainless steel number plates. Easily mounted vertically or horizontally, the optional illuminated panels come in amber, blue, green, red or white. Numeral plates, $20 each; light panels from $65; available through 100watt Network, www.100watt.net or 415.371.1631.

House Number Connection's Hacienda line perfectly complements Spanish Colonial Revival architecture, or just adds a lively look to other styles. In a variety of finishes; $12.95-41.95 at www.housenumberconnection.com.

The verdigris patina of Restoration Hardware's Verdi house numbers will lend old-world appeal to your home's façade. $10 at www.restorationhardware.com; check individual stores for availability.

Atlas Homewares' Avalon numbers will complement a post-modern loft as nicely as a bungalow. Can mount flush on a wall, or set upon extension tubes. $16.90 each at www.atlashomewares.com.

Make an impact with the beefy, bold numerals of the Clarendon line by Architectural Numbers. Custom order size and finish (ranging from satin aluminum to verdigris bronze to colorful enamel). Prices range from $30 to $125, at www.architecturalnumbers.com.

Rustic and rugged are the buzzwords for these hand-hammered steel numbers. Their antique iron finish will oxidize with time and the elements, lending a vintage air. $18 each from www.rejuvenation.com.
